EVERYTHING IS COMING UP DAFFODILS

Like the dozens of daffodils that are spreading wide across the church property to welcome folks to the church, let us spring up, bear fruit, and meet the challenge to paydown our mortgage principal.

Our new relationship with nVision will bear even more fruit as new tenants and resulting income streams pop up. And finally, these cheerful flowers give us hope for our future as we continue the call process.

In Scripture Today

Fourth Sunday in Lent

The fourth Sunday in Lent continues the focus on baptism as a key to the Christian life. During Lent, as we prepare candidates for baptism, we remember our own baptism and renew our lives to live more fully in the light of baptismal grace.

John 3:14-21

The context of the beloved John 3:16 includes reference to Israelite sin, death by poison, the darkness of this world, hatred of God, and the evil that people commit. In John, eternal life begins now, in and among the baptized. In contrast to the story from Numbers in which people die of snakebite, John describes God as choosing to save, rather than condemn. The world, which does not know God, is loved by God.

Numbers 21:4-9

The narrative from Numbers provides the story to which the gospel refers. With John in mind, we can say that the Israelites "loved darkness" and are "perishing." The fiery serpent, like Christ, was "lifted up." Those dying of snakebite, like Christians, are invited to believe.

Ephesians 2:1-10

This passage is a magnificent compendium of Lenten baptismal proclamation. Baptism has given us life in Christ so that by grace we will do the good works of God.
